

Downtown Resource Guide

Welcome!

There are many benefits of living and working in downtown Sioux City. The downtown area is full of exciting dining and entertainment options, many within walking distance. Citizens can take comfort in knowing that they are close to emergency services (police, fire, hospital) as well as their place of work. The Sioux City Police Department has created this resource guide to pledge our commitment to providing positive and professional policing services to all our businesses and citizens who call Downtown Sioux City home.

We encourage you to use the information provided to personally connect with the service providers and officers that serve your district.

Problem Solving

Despite all the benefits and advantages of living and working downtown, occasionally you may encounter nuisances or situations where you need assistance. If you are dealing with any of the following items, it is suggested that you call the listed service providers for assistance.

Emergency (911)

Emergency situations are best handled with a call to 911. The dispatcher will send the appropriate units to respond (ex- police, fire, ems). These situations may involve injuries, medical emergencies, accidents, physical violence or disturbances.

Non-Emergency (712) 279-6960

In situations where non-emergency crimes are encountered or need reporting, the Police Department should be called.

This may involve such things as...

- Past tense assaults, threats, and harassment
- Thefts, trespassing, vandalism (criminal mischief)
- Littering, panhandling, public intoxication, disorderly conduct, loud music/noise
- Parking problems, municipal code violations/permits, abandoned vehicles

Other non-emergency questions can likely be directed to resources other than first responders. City Clerk for assistance. Examples include...

- Stray/Nuisance animals (Animal Control)
- Building codes and permits, inspection services (City Clerk)

Transients

Be aware of the common laws typically broken by transients and understand what elements police will need to enforce these laws. For example, here is an excerpt from the Criminal Trespass code:

“Entering or remaining upon or in property without justification after being notified or requested to abstain from entering or to remove or vacate therefrom by the owner, lessee, or person in lawful possession, or the agent or employee of the owner, lessee, or person in lawful possession, or by any peace officer, magistrate, or public employee whose duty it is to supervise the use or maintenance of the property.”

In this case, in order for law enforcement to be able to enforce criminal trespass immediately upon arriving at the business (and remove the offender) it is necessary that personnel from the business have first advised the unwanted persons to leave the property. When the transient does not leave after being requested to do so, one of the elements of the crime has been fulfilled and the enforcement can proceed.

- Be consistent in dealing with transients. All employees from various shifts should give the same message and act the same. For example, when the day shift employees adopt a “zero-tolerance” policy, only to find that the overnight crew acts completely different, this inconsistency only prolongs the problems.
- Ensure proper signage and notifications are posted on business property (doors, gates, parking lots, etc.).
- Look at your facility design (Lighting, barriers, landscaping, locked doors, etc.) to make the property less of an attractive nuisance to would-be trespassers.
- If current staff is not able to perform security related tasks, (ex- 24/7 patrol of site) consider hiring private security.
- Keep in mind when dealing with transients, there may be unseen health and safety concerns to staff and customers presented by the transients (intoxication, mental health issues, biohazards and possible weapons).
- Obtain quality video surveillance equipment to aid in preventing problems, oversee a safe environment for staff and customers, identify suspects and ultimately prosecute offenders.
- Do not allow transient subjects to make any “footholds” on the property. No sleeping bags, no tents, no bags, no personal items should be allowed to remain on your property or be kept on the property.
- Trash should be removed as soon as possible, and any vandalism immediately repaired.
- Do not offer cash, food, clothing, or other resources to the transients. There are numerous charitable local agencies that are set up to provide for all the basic needs of the transients. The transients know where to get free meals and despite your intentions, may use the money provided to purchase illicit substances.

Resources for the Homeless Population

Sioux City's Coordinated Entry program is the first point of contact for anyone staying in a homeless shelter, on the streets, or in a vehicle to support them on their housing journey. They conduct an assessment to determine appropriate resources and referrals, and adds them to the waiting list for supportive housing opportunities. They are a part of the Siouxland Coalition to End Homelessness, a non-profit organization that covers Woodbury County, Iowa and Dakota County, Nebraska. Together with 37 other local organizations, they provide a continuum of services designed to support those experiencing homelessness.

Below are a variety of immediate resources available for those that are experiencing homelessness.
